COPD 2019

1 year on from the publication of the GOLD Guidelines, COPD 2019 will address the implications for secondary care clinical practice. The conference will also explore the multidisciplinary approach to COPD care across the primary and secondary care sectors, with panel discussions and interactive case studies providing delegates with lots of practical information to take away from the meeting. As a delegate, you will be invited to submit complex case studies for expert review, and the intimate nature of the meeting will mean that there will be lots of time for Q&A with the speakers.

Who should attend?

COPD 2019 will be of particular interest to the following:

- Specialists in respiratory and thoracic medicine
- GPs with a specialist interest in respiratory medicine
- Specialist respiratory nurses
- Physiotherapists
- Specialists in rehabilitation medicine
- Specialists in palliative care
- Community nurse specialists
- Practice nurses
- COPD service commissioners/ manager
- All trainees in these disciplines

15.15-16.35 Refreshments and networking

15.35-16.00 Diagnostic overshadowing or missed diagnosis? Why it is easy to miss anxiety and depression in COPD patients

- Anxiety and depression are often associated with poor physical health status and prognosis often due to diagnostic overshadowing
- Symptoms of mental illness which are similarly associated with COPD (e.g. fatigue and reduced physical activity) may be overlooked.
- Mental illness can increase the burden of COPD by increasing the perception of dyspnoea via hyperventilation, stress response and panic attacks

Dr Daniel O'Toole, Imperial Healthcare Trust

16.00-16.30 Tools for early integration of the advance care pathway in COPD

- There has long been a low uptake of palliative care for COPD patients
- Effective provisions are in place, but services are underused for this population

Deborah Roots, Cardiorespiratory Nurse Consultant, Homerton University Hospital Foundation Trust

16.30 Take home message on how you can improve the healthcare of your patients
